

FAIR PROPRIETORS OF
DAILY MUSIC COMPANY.

(From The Indicator):
The Daily Music Company of Grand Rapids, Wis., is an establishment of which any city might well be proud. The progressive organization, the dignified and on-the-square manner in which the business is conducted, the popular proprietors, and the long standing of the house, all combine to give it the high reputation which it has so long enjoyed in that community. About 1886, Frank P. Daly established the Centralia Jewelry & Music Company at Centralia, Wis., just across the Wisconsin River from Grand Rapids the two later merging into one city. In 1903 Mr. Daly died, and this left the burden of the piano business entirely on his widow, Mrs. Daly, who continued to carry it on in spite of adverse circumstances; her four children being then quite small. Undaunted, however, Mrs. Daly, brought up her four children and at the same time successfully handled the piano business—and any mother

PROGRAM ARRANGED
FOR THE FOURTH

The Fourth of July committee has been holding meetings during the past few days and have partially arranged a program, and the indications are that there will be something doing all day for those that care to spend their time in this city.

The day will be opened by a salute of 21 guns at sunrise by Captain E. L. Brown.

J. B. Arpin has been appointed Marshal of the day so that this part of it will be attended to all right.

The auto parade occurs at 11:45 a. m. and three prizes have been set aside for the best decorated auto. The first prize will be $35.00, second prize $25.00, and third prize $15.00. With such substantial prizes in view there should be a good turnout and some nicely decorated vehicles. The committee in charge of the auto parade consists of T. E. Mullen, F. G. Gilkey, Otto Roepjus and Mesdames J. B. Arpin, L. E. Witter and A. G. Miller. The judges are Mrs. L. M. Alexander, Mrs. L. E. Nash, Mrs. P. McCamley, Rev. R. J. Locke and R. L. Nash.

The motorcycle races occur at 9:45 a. m., and a purse of $30.00 has been set aside for this event; to be divided into three prizes of $15.00, $10.00 and $5.00. Wm. F. Glue and Eugene Miller constitute the committee in charge of this event.

A bicycle race for boys under 15 years of age is scheduled for 10:45 o'clock, with three prizes of $5.00, $3.00 and $2.00. Messrs. Glue and Miller also have charge of this event.

The sum of $50.00 has been set aside for the swimming races and there will probably be two events, one in the forenoon and one after supper. Messrs. G. W. Mead, J. B. Arpin and Harold Arpin constitute the committee in charge of these events.

A motor boat race for Evinrude detachable motors will be held at two o'clock in the afternoon, the prize to be a loving cup presented by the Evinrude Motor Co. The committee in charge of the event is Kenneth McCamley, E. B. Redford and E. W. Ellis.

A purse of $6.00 has been appropriated for a fat men's race divided into three prizes of $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00. The race will occur at 2:00 o'clock p. m. and will be from the St. Paul Depot to the Dixon Hotel. Messrs. Mullen, Glue and Redford have charge of this event.

A running race, prizes $10.00 and $5.00 at 2:30 p. m. will occur from the T. E. Nash corner to the Commercial House. Messrs. Nash and McCarthy have charge of this event.

At 3:00 o'clock p. m. a sprint will occur at the same place with three prizes of $5.00, $3.00 and $2.00. Messrs. Mullen, Glue and Frank Notwick are in charge.

The Second Regiment band of Marshfield has been engaged to furnish music for the day, and as this is one of the best street and marching bands in the state, there is no question but what this part of the program will be first class. It is possible that the home band will be reorganized enough to also get out and render some music during the day.

There will also be a dog and pony show, a ball game at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon, fire works and a dance in the evening. There will be bands playing all day, and it is expected that there will be enough doing to satisfy the most exacting. Additional information will be given in a later edition of the Tribune.

Don't Like Horse Traders.
Grand Rapids, Wis., June 15, 1914
To the Editor of the Grand Rapids Tribune:

Dear Sir:—If you think it is all right, kindly publish the below, if not, throw it into the waste paper basket.

When arriving at the market square last Tuesday, I found a number of horse traders there flooding the market with their horses. Now I was under the impression this was a farmers' market but the way things looked to me the farmers did not get a square deal as the number of horses that were there certainly lowered the price of the horses the farmers had to sell. I know of one instance that a farmer took a good sound team of working horses to the fair this spring asking $300.00 for the team but did not even get a bid on it as the horse traders had lower priced horses on the market.

Now the point I am driving at is this: These horse traders are no residents or tax payers of Wood county, so do the locality no good that way and if farmer's send off to mail order houses that are no taxpayer's here, there is a certain amount of kicking done. Now why not turn around and give the farmers a square deal too?

Isn't there anything to be done to keep these horse traders out of the community? It is to be understood that I neither have a horse to sell or want to buy one but am only asking for a square deal.

A Farmer.

Shearier-Kuehl.

Varnum Shearier and Miss Eleanor Kuehl were married on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock at the First Moravian church, Rev. C. A. Mellick officiating. They were attended by Henry Kuehl and Miss Elsie Fahl. The ceremony was attended by a large number of friends and relatives, followed by a wedding supper at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kuehl at the South Side. After a wedding trip to Rhineland and other points in the state the young couple will probably go to housekeeping in this city. The Tribune unites with numerous friends in extending congratulations.

Will Erect Homes.
J. T. Stark and W. C. Weisel have recently purchased the four lots on Third street belonging to W. F. Kellogg just south of the John Thompson residence, and it is their intention to erect modern residences on them during the coming summer. The place is ideally located for residence purposes.

GRAND RAPIDS MAN AFTER
PRICE FIXING DATA

St. Louis Republic.—C. E. LaVigne, representing the Bureau of Corporations of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., is in St. Louis conferring with industrial heads, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers relative to their views on the Stevens and Metz bills, pending in Congress.

The measures propose to re-establish the right of the manufacturer to fix the various prices at which his product is to be sold to the jobber, retailer and consumer, respectively. Manufacturers who have exercised this right in the past recently found their methods upset by decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

The question of the advisability of re-establishing the practice by congressional legislation is one on which the business men of the country have expressed widely diverse views.

It is with the idea of finding out just what the prevailing sentiment is that the Department of Commerce has sent the investigator to every large city in America to study the question of "resale price maintenance."

Mr. LaVigne has visited dozens of cities and will continue his investigations to the north and east of St. Louis after a few days here.

Before supporting or opposing the proposed bills, it is said, Secretary Reed determined to make the fullest possible inquiry among the business men of the country and allow them every opportunity to express their views and the reasons for them.

The first rural school graduation exercises for the south end of Wood county will be held at the Lincoln High School on Wednesday afternoon, June 17th.

Spelling Contest.

After the program a spelling contest will be held to decide the county championship. The contest at Marshfield was won by Helen Peterson, district No. 2, town of Lincoln, and she will compete with the successful candidate in this city for the championship.

The successful one of these two will represent Wood county at the contest to be held at the state fair this fall. The county champion will be entitled to a free trip to the state fair and two days entertainment at the fair. This contest for the state championship is financed by the state fair board.

Kerwin-Nash.
Miss Nellie Kerwin of Portage and Mr. Robert L. Nash of this city were married at 6 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Catholic church in Portage, Rev. Morris performing the ceremony that made them man and wife.

They were accompanied by Miss Mae Kerwin and Mr. Charles Nash as bridesmaid and groomsmen, and after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Nash left the same morning on their wedding trip which will occupy about two weeks and will be thru the east, after which they will return to this city to make their home.

The groom, Mr. Nash, is well known in this city, being our postmaster here, and is one of our rising young business men who has proven himself to be a man of sterling worth. The bride, while not so well known in this city, has visited here on several occasions, and has many friends here among the young people, and is a most estimable young lady, and the Tribune not only extends the warmest of congratulations, but wishes them a long and happy wedded life.

Among those who went down from here to attend the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Nash, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Nash, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Nash, Miss Isabelle Nash, and George and Neal Nash.

Candidate for County Clerk.

Will Nobles has been urged by a number of his friends to make the race for county clerk on the Democratic ticket this fall. Will is at present studying law in the office of Attorney W. E. Wheelan and as a member of the county board the past two terms has had considerable experience with the office of county clerk. He is a Grand Rapids product and has many friends about the city and surrounding country who will be glad to give him a boost if he should make the run.

Michael Griffin of Marshfield has informed a number of his friends that he intends to enter the race for sheriff and Attorney Hugh Gogkins has already announced himself as a candidate for District Attorney.

The Democrats will have a strong ticket in the field this fall and from present indications should win in a walk.

BIRTHS.

A son to Mr. and Mrs. Reinhardt Henke on Monday.

A daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Behmler.

A son, to Mr. and Mrs. O'Linge on Second street.

Elks Had a Big Time.

There was a large crowd of local Elks went to Wausau last week to attend the state convention in that city, and according to all reports they had a good time. There were a number of bands present that helped enliven matters, and the Elks band from this city did its share in this respect. The local boys were dressed in rubie attire, and are said to have made quite a hit. Only about twenty members of the band were able to attend, some of them having duties that kept them at home, but those who were present did their full share toward the jollification.

The business houses in Wausau were gaily decorated for the occasion and the people there seemed to enter into the spirit of the day. It is said that there were fully three thousand visitors there from out of the city.

The prize for the best drilled team went to Racine. Some of our local Elks went up in automobiles and others on the trains on Monday and Tuesday, and the greatest number went up on Wednesday on the special train.

Otto R. Roenius was elected president of the state association, which was one of the things that the Grand Rapids Elks was after, and as a consequence they were pretty generally pleased with the outcome of the meeting.

Marshfield Coming Down Strong.

City Attorney R. R. Williams of Marshfield was in the city on Tuesday attending county court. Mr. Williams informed the Tribune man that there was going to be a monster crowd down from his city on the Fourth. If the weather is favorable Mr. Williams said there would be over 100 autos down besides those that would come down on a special train. Weather conditions being favorable there certainly will be a big crowd in the city on that day and our hotels and restaurants should make preparation to properly handle and feed those from outside.

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to leave their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Guadalupe Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican had spent a large sum of money and then had allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and De Lancey start for the mine.

CHAPTER V.

The journey to Fortuna is a scant fifty miles by measure, but within these eight kilometers there is a lapse of centuries in standards. As Bud and De Lancey rode out of battle-scarred Agua Negra they traveled a good road, well worn by the Mexican wood-wagons that hauled in mesquite from the hills. Then, as they left the town and the road scattered, the highway changed by degrees to a broad trail, dug deep by the feet of pack-animals and marked by light with wheels. It followed along the railroad, cutting over hills and down through gulches, and by evening they were in the heart of Old Mexico.

Here were men in sandals and women barefooted; chickens tied up by the legs outside of brush jalcals; long-nosed dogs, grunting fiercely as they skinned for food; and half-naked children, staring like startled rabbits at the strangers.

The smell of garlic and fresh-roasting coffee was in the air as they drew into town for the night, and their room was an adobe chamber with the wooden roof bare across the windows.

Riding south the next day they met vaqueros, mounted on virgins, many of whom saluted them gravely, taking no shame for their primitive wooden saddles and pommels as broad as soup plates.

As they left the broad plain and clambered up over the back of a mountain they passed Indian houses, brush-built and thatched with long, coarse grasses, and by the fires the women ground corn on stone metates as their ancestors had done before the fall. For in Mexico there are two peoples, the Spaniards and the natives, and the Indians still remember the days when they were free.

It was through such a land that Phil and Hooker rode on their gallant ponies, leading a pack-animal well loaded with supplies from the north, and as the people gazed from their miserable hovels and saw their outfit they wondered at their wealth.

But if they were moved to envy, the bulk of a heavy pistol, shining through the swell of each coat, discouraged them from going farther; and the cold, searching look of the tall cowboy as he ambled past stayed in their memory long after the pleasant "Adios!" of De Lancey had been forgotten.

Americans were scarce in those days, and what few came by were riding to the north. How bold, then, must this big man be who rode in front—and certainly he had some great reward before him to risk such a horse among the revolutionists! So reasoned the simple-minded natives of the mountains, gazing in admiration at Copper Bottom, and for that look in their eyes Bud returned his forbidding stare.

There is something about a good horse that fascinates the average Mexican—perhaps because they breed the finest themselves and are in a position to judge—but Hooker had developed a romantic attachment for his trim little chestnut mount and he resented their wide-eyed gawping as a lover resents glances at his lady. This, and a frontier education, rendered him short-spoken and gruff with the paisanos and it was left to the cavalier De Lancey to do the courtesies of the road.

As the second day wore on they dipped down into a rocky canyon, with huge cliffs of red and yellow sandstone glowing in the slanting sun, and soon they broke out into a narrow valley, well wooded with acyanones and mesquite and giant hackberry trees.

The shrill toots of a dummy engine came suddenly from down below and a smudge of black smoke rose majestically against the sky. Then, at a turn of the trail, they topped the last hill and Fortuna lay before them.

In that moment they were set back again fifty miles—clear back across the line—for Fortuna was American, from the powerhouse on the creek bank to the mammoth concentrator on the hill.

All the buildings were of stone, square and uniform. First a central plaza, flanked with offices and warehouses; then behind them barracks and lodging houses and trim cottages in orderly rows; and over across the canyon loomed the huge bulk of the mill and the concentrator with its aerial tramway and endless row of gliding buckets.

Only on the lower hills, where the rough country rock cropped up and nature was at its worst, only there did the real Mexican creep in and assert itself in a crude huddle of half-Indian huts; the dwellings of the care-free natives.

"Well, by Jove!" exclaimed De Lancey, surveying the scene with an appraising eye, "this doesn't look very much like Mexico—or a revolution, either!"

"No, it don't," admitted Bud; "every thing running full blast, too. Look at that ore train coming around the hill!"

"Gee, what a burg!" raved Phil; "say, there's some class in this—what? If I mistake not, we'll be able to find a few congenial spirits here to help us spend our money. Talk about a company town! I'll bet you their barroom is full of Americans. There's the coral down below—let's ride by and leave our horses and see what's the price of drinks. They can't freeze me, whatever it is—we doubled our money at the line."

"SIMPLY HAD TO STOP TRAIN"

Conductor's Explanation Surely Should Have Been Satisfactory to Exasperated Millionaire.

The A-One Limited from Zingville to New York sped along the steel rails like an extra well-greased streak of lightning. Not for forty years had the A-One Limited been a second rate. It couldn't afford to be. It carried more brokers than any other three-trains in the world—rich men who, if they were late at the office, fired the clerk.

Hence the confusion, not to say consternation, when the train jerked to an unexpected stop half way between their western station and their destination.

Second after second rushed by, and still the A-One Limited moved not.

"Grated ticket!" moaned Harvey Tickler, in the parlor car, "if it doesn't start in ten seconds, advertised peanuts, preferred, will be out-of me reach and I'll lose $4,000,000, and my carefree home!"

"This is terrible!" cried Knock-feller Horgan, laying down the club copy of "Three Weeks." "If I'm eight seconds late this morning, Standard Day Run will be ruined!"

And so it went from one end of the car to the other. And still the seconds went by, and still the A-One Limited moved not.

him it was a Mexican town. Maybe he's around here now—his name was Mendez."

"Jose Maria Mendez?" inquired Don Juan, who was a living directory of the place. "Ricardo? Pancho? Cruz?" "Cruz!" cried De Lancey; "that was it!"

"He lives down the river a couple of miles," said Don Juan; "down at Old Fortuna."

"Old Fortuna!" repeated Phil. "I didn't know there was such a place."

"Why, my gracious!" exclaimed Don Juan de Dios, scandalized by such ignorance. "Do you mean to say you have been here three days and never heard of Fortuna Vieja?"

"What's where this man Aragon, the big Mexican of the country, has his ranch and store. Spanish? Him? No, indeed—mtd! He is half Spanish and half Yuki Indian, but his wife is a pure Spaniard—one of the few in the country. Her father was from Madrid and she is a Villanueva—a very beautiful woman in her day, with golden hair and the presence of a queen!"

"No, not Irish! My goodness, you Americans think that everybody with red hair is Irish! Why, the most beautiful women in Madrid have chestnut hair as soft as the fur of a dormouse. It is the old Castilian hair, and they are proud of it. The Senora Aragon married beneath her station—it was in the City of Mexico, and she did not know that he was an Indian—but she is a very nice lady for all that and never omits to bow to me when she comes up to take the train. I remember one time—"

"Does Cruz Mendez work for him?" interjected De Lancey desperately.

"No, indeed!" answered Don Juan patiently; "he packs in wood from the hills—but as I was saying—and from that he went on to tell of the unfailing courtesy of the Senora Aragon to a gentleman whom, whatever his present station might be, she recognized as a member of one of the oldest families in Castilla."

De Lancey did not press his inquiries any further, but the next morning, instead of riding back into the hills, he and Bud turned their faces down the canyon to seek out the elusive Mendez. They had, of course, been acting as if Don Juan, since Kruger had described Old Fortuna and the Senora Aragon with great minuteness.

And now, in the guise of innocent strangers, they rode on down the river, past the concentrator with its multiple tanks, its gliding tramway and mountains of tailings, through the village of Indian houses stuck like dugouts against the barren hill—then along a river bed that oozed with slickens until they came in sight of the town.

La Fortuna was an old town, yet not as old as its name, since two Fortunas before it had been washed away by cloudbursts and replaced by newer dwellings. The settlement itself was some four hundred years old, dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, when it yielded up many multitudes of gold.

The present town was built a little way from the river in the lee of a great ridge of rocks thrust down from the hill and well calculated to turn aside a glut of waters. It was a comfortable huddle of whitewashed adobe buildings on both sides of a narrow and irregular road—the great trail that led down to the hot country and was worn deep by the pack-trains of centuries.

On the lower side was the ample store and cantina of Don Cipriano, where the thirsty arrieros could get a drink and buy a panocha of sugar without getting down from their mounts. Behind the store were the pole corrals and adobe warehouses and the quarters of the peons, and across the road was the mesal still, where in huge copper retort and worm, the fiery liquor was distilled from the sugar-laden heads of Yucana.

This was the town, but the most important building—set back in the shade of mighty cottonwoods and pleasantly aloof from the road—was the residence of Senora Aragon. It was this, in fact, which held the undivided attention of De Lancey as they rode quietly through the village, for he had become accustomed from a long experience in the tropics to look for something elusive, graceful and feminine in houses set back in a garden.

Nothing stirred, however, and having good reason to avoid Don Cipriano, they jogged steadily on their way.

"Some house!" observed Phil, with a last hopeful look over his shoulder.

"Uh," assented Bud, as they came to a fork in the road. "Say," he continued, "let's turn off on this trail. Let our burros go out—expect it of our friend, Mr. Mendez."

"All right," said De Lancey absently; "wonder where old Aragon keeps that beautiful daughter of his—the one Don Juan was telling about. Have to stop on the way back and sample the old man's mesal."

"Nothing doing!" countered Hooker instantly. "Now you heard what I told you—there's two things you leave alone for sixty days—booze and women. After we winch our title you can get as gay as you please."

"Oo-ee!" piped Phil, "hear the boy talk!" But he said no more of wine and women, for he knew how they complicated life.

They rode to the east now, following the long, flat footprints of the burros, and by all the leading straight for the old Eagle Tail mine. At Old Fortuna the river turns west and at the same time four canyons came in from the east and south. Of these they had taken the first to the north and it was leading them past all the old workings that Kruger had spoken about. In fact, they were almost at the mine when Hooker swung down suddenly from his horse and motioned Phil to follow.

"There's some burros coming," he said, glancing back significantly; and when the pack-train came by, each animal piled high with broken wood the two Americans were busily tapping away at a section of country rock. A man and a boy followed behind the animals, gazing with wonder at the strangers, and the Phil bade them a pleasant "Buenos dias!" they came to a halt and stared at their industry in silence. In the interval Phil was pleased to note that the old man had only one eye.

"Just listen to this passage: 'Outside the wire, mousers, mousers, mousers, his voice now that of a child which sob within itself in the night, now that of a woman who suffers great pain alone, as women have suffered since life began. And, mingled with the wailing of the wind, rain fell—heavily, intermittently, like tears from souls of strong men.'"

"Well," said the author.

"Well," retorted the publisher, "why not say simply 'It was raining'?"

Old Man Could Not Understand How Orator Could Make Good Speech Without a Drink.

William Jennings Bryan as a young man visited a small place in Illinois for the purpose of showing the voters exactly how to vote. Shortly before the psychological moment came for young Bryan to let loose the floods of oratory an old countryman approached him mysteriously and silently led him around to the back of the schoolhouse. There he drew from his pocket a bottle of whiskey and pronounced the classic command, "Have a drink." "No, thanks," said Mr. Bryan. The old man's eyes widened, and in their depths was the shadow of fear. "Just a little," he said persuasively. "No, not even a little," Mr. Bryan declined again politely. The old man's eyes began to bulge. "Just one drop," he insisted. Mr. Bryan declined for the third time. The old man's chest grew flatter, his shoulders sagged, and he was the picture of melancholy as he said with indescribable pathos: "Well, do the best you can, anyway."

SCALY PSORIASIS ON LIMBS

Troop H, 6th U. S. Cavalry, Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis.—I was troubled with psoriasis for nearly two years. Portions of my arms and limbs were affected mostly with it. It appeared in scaly form, breaking out in very small dots and gradually grew larger and white scales formed when about the size of an ordinary match-head. The looks of it was horrible, which made it very unpleasant for me. It itched a little at times.

"I tried several treatments which cured me for a month, but it always broke out again. One day a friend saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper and I sent for a sample. They helped me, so I purchased two more boxes of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap and they completely cured me. It took three months for Cuticura Soap and Ointment to complete my cure." The speaker was Yngve Lungstrom, the noted railway engineer of Denver. He continued:

"In a block once in the traffic of the City of Mexico my caddy shrieked at the man ahead of us:

"I had a beard like yours once, but when I found what it made me look like, Santa Maria, I cut it off."

"Yes," answered the other caddy, "I had a face like yours once, and when I found I couldn't cut it off, by the holy St. Christopher, I raised a beard."

Presidency—Carranza Plans Reply
to United States.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 11.—Mexican peace negotiations have taken a new turn. A strong indication was given that the Washington government is unwilling to extend a provisional president named according to the method prescribed by the Mexican
delegates, which is that General Huerta would appoint as minister of foreign affairs the man who is agreed on
in the mediation conference to head
the new government.

This indication became apparent at a two-hour session between the mediators and the American delegates.

The United States is unwilling to extend recognition to a new provisional president if named according to the method prescribed by the Mexican
delegates, which is that General Huerta would appoint as minister of foreign affairs the man who is agreed on
in the mediation conference to head
the new government.

Although the Washington administration contends that if General Huerta is permitted to name the foreign minister,
who, by constitutional succession,
would be elevated to the presidency,
even though the selection be made through mediation, such an act would be construed as recognition of the Huerta government.

On this issue the mediating envoys came to a flat disagreement at the day's conference, held for consideration of the exact method by which the new provisional government in Mexico should be created.

For more than two hours the mediators and American delegates argued in vain and it was apparent when the conference ended that what had been considered a matter of detail suddenly developed a snag.

Although the three South American mediators argued strongly from the Mexican viewpoint, there was reason to believe that the Mexican delegates would not insist on this arrangement
if they found the United States determined against it.

Washington, June 11.—Every indication in Washington points to some form of participation by the constitutionalists of Mexico in the mediation conference at Niagara Falls, leading toward the settlement of international differences affecting the Huerta government as well as internal troubles of Mexico. It was expected the definite position of Carranza would be communicated to his local agents and sent on to Niagara Falls before many hours.

The subject of amputation from the United States for the constitutionalists continued an issue of official concern. The cabinet deliberations resulted in a direct order from Secretary Redfield to hold up a cargo of ammunition en route to Galveston aboard to Morgan liner El Sud for transshipment to Tampico.

The Ward liner Antilla, from New York with a cargo of ammunition for Carranza, is due at Tampico today.
Huerta having suspended the blockade of the port and his gunboats having returned toward Puerto Mexico, some officials expressed the opinion that its cargo would not be interfered with.

Saltillo, Coahuila, June 11.—General Carranza's prospective reply to the latest communication from the South American mediators in being thoroughly discussed by him and his advisers.
What the purport of the reply will be has not been indicated at Carranza's headquarters, but there is a strong feeling among leaders that the plan of Guadalupe will be adhered to rigidly.

later delivered the diplomas to the young midshipmen. He declared the duty of the United States is to serve the world.

Speaking of the Vera Cruz situa-

that "I pray God the boys there will be able to fight any more." He added that the real good they will do cans.

vention. Watertown was in the field, but was not represented. The closing event of the convention was the julti-fication at the fair grounds, during which the U. C. T. ball teams from Appleton and Eau Claire played a lively game, Appleton winning, 6 to 3.

An elaborate banquet was served to 250 couples last night at White City pavilion by the Boy Scouts after the annual ball.

age along the railroads and on farms
in central and northern Wisconsin.
The flood damage is increasing.

Dairymen Make Many Tests.

Nearly four hundred and fifty cows,
owned by 77 breeders in 28 counties of Wisconsin, are being tested to determine their milk and butter fat producing capabilities. According to official figures from the department of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, this is the largest number of cows ever under test at one time in the state.

Each of the five dairy breeds popular with Wisconsin farmers is represented in the tests, forty-six of the herds being Guernsey, eighteen Holstein, eight Jersey, one Ayrshire and one Brown Swiss.

Two of the great dairy counties of the state—Waushara and Fond du Lac—lead in number of herds and cows under test. Waushara county is represented in the records with nineteen herds or 119 cows, and Fond du Lac has eight herds or sixty-four cows under semi-official trials. Jefferson county is a close third with six herds or thirty cows.

Accountancy Law Is Valid.

That a person who has not been a resident of Wisconsin at least one year prior to the passage of the Wisconsin public accountancy law may not be licensed as a certified public accountant is held in an opinion by Attorney General Owens to John R.
Tanner, president of the state board of accountancy.

J. T. Drought on behalf of a client appeared before the board and objected on the ground that this feature of the law violates the provision of the state constitution that citizens of each state shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several states.

In the opinion of District Attorney
E. P. Gorman of Marathon county, Attorney General Owens holds that where a building occupied as a saloon is burned the town board has no authority to allow the saloonkeeper to move his place to another without a new license.

To Dr. H. C. Bumpus, Business Manager of the University, the Attorney General Gives an Opinion, That Dean H. L. Russell May Rent a House Which He Owns to the University to be Used by the Department of Entomology. It Is Held That Dean Russell Would Not Make the Contract as a Private Citizen.

Grasshoppers in Badger State.

Grasshoppers are appearing in alarming numbers, in several sections of our central Wisconsin counties, and immediate efforts should be put forth to check their destruction of our crops.

This warning is issued by the entomology department of the University of Wisconsin. Prof. J. G. Sanders, head of the department, says that poisons or other control measures can be most effectively applied before the hoppers produce their wings for flight.

Fair Buildings to Be Rebuilt.

The Wisconsin state fair board met in Milwaukee to inspect the wreckage
at the state fair grounds and to plan ways of carrying on the fair without rebuilding all of the structures destroyed by a storm. Scarcity of funds was expected to cause some trouble.
President O. G. Rewey and Secretary J. C. McKenzie have been here to look over the grounds.

in the afternoon there will be athletic contests on Highland lawn. At night
the Ladies' auxiliary will give an entertainment followed by dancing.

The selection of the place for the next annual meeting will be determined and the installation of officers will take place at the Saturday morning session. There will be athletic sports and a band concert in the afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, terminating the four days' gathering. Upwards of 150 prizes will be awarded,
not only in athletic and social events
to both men and women, but also for best papers, and prescriptions submitted. The convention promises to be the most successful yet held by the affiliated organizations.

State to Get Farm Fund.

Governor McGovern gave formal assent of the state of Wisconsin to the Smith-Lever act which provides for co-operative agricultural extension work between the states and the United States department of agriculture.
The assent authorizes the board of regents of the university to receive installments as they become due to the state before adjournment.

The law makes available for the next nine fiscal years $25,120,000 of federal funds for instruction and demonstrations in agriculture and home economics. To obtain this total sum states must appropriate for like purposes a total of $18,900,000, making a grand total of $44,020,000 to be expended during the nine years. Thereafter the federal government is to appropriate $4,580,000 annually, and the states must appropriate $4,100,000 annually, making a total of $8,680,000.

Wisconsin's share for the fiscal year 1914-15 is $10,000, and it is to place the state in position to receive this amount from the federal government that Governor McGovern took the action.

Plan Honor Convict Camp.

Convict labor in building state roads is to be used in Wisconsin soon under the direction of the state board of control. Two camps of prisoners are to be placed at work in an experimental way within the next month, one at Waupun and one at Tayneedah, near the woman's industrial home.

The plan of the board is to put the prisoners wholly upon their honor.
Each company will contain about 30
and no guard will be placed over them,
the superintendent to be a person selected by the highway commission to have charge of the engineering aspects of the work and the foreman to have general direction of the men.

The work at Waupun is to be upon what is known as the Waupun-Chester road, a bad piece of highway where it is proposed to build a modern concrete road. At Tayneedah the prisoners are to be employed in doing the preliminary work, such as grading and getting the roadbed ready.

Superior Much Improved in Health.

and it is believed, on the road

ralysis.

Jackson, an Indian, was found floating at the mouth of the Fourteen Mile creek, just below this city, by a party of boys fishing. The inquest inand a Pottawatomie from Arpin. He had been missing two weeks.

of the jail, then he made his escape.

who was found guilty of running her home for immoral purposes, following the closing of the red-light district,
was sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Ashland.—J. D. Brownell, head of the English department of Northland college two years, has been elected president of the college. President M. J. Fenenga resigned to go to the Pacific coast.

La Crosse.—The annual meeting of the Western Guernsey Breeders' association will be held in West Salem June 19. It is expected the meeting will be attended by hundreds of cattlemen throughout the West.

Janesville.—Fifty dollars and costs is the fine that Judge Maxfield is assessing automobile drivers who exceed the speed limit, and one dollar and costs for the bicycle riders who travel on the walks. Without warning the police started a crusade and the motorcycle officer began rounding
them up.

Madison.—Formal announcement of his candidacy for United States senator was made by Gov. Francis E. McGovern. He is standing upon his record as governor of the state, for downward revision of the tariff and for a reorganization of the methods of distribution of food products. The latter is his most important issue.

Janesville.—An aged man, accompanied by his son, came back "to his old home to select his last resting place" in Oak Hill cemetery. With W. T. Shearer, president of the Cemetery association, he picked out a $40
burial lot and presented a $75 check in payment, receiving $35 in change.
Mr. Shearer is out the $35, for the check has been declared bad.

Sheboygan.—His miraculous escape
from injury, to say nothing from instant death, in an accident a few years ago, caused Rev. Father Charles Gerhard Myers, who was ordained to the priesthood at St. Franciscus June 1, and read his first mass in the St. Peter Claver church here, to study for the ministry. While working in his father's machine shop a machine under which he was working,
weighing over a ton, accidentally fell,
but in some manner its fall was stopped within a few inches of him.

Marquette.—Nettie St. Clair, aged twenty-two, a professional seaman,
was dashed to death in the presence of several thousand people at Lakeside. She had ascended a distance of 800 feet. As she was over the water it is presumed she unbuckled
the safety belt that held her to the parachute so that when she fell she would not be dragged under the water. While doing this she seemingly lost her hold. As the water was shallow the impact caused almost instant death.

Sheboygan.—That the two young men who robbed a store in Manitowoc worked a similar game here and escaped to Milwaukee is the belief of the local police, and the Milwaukee police have been given a description of them. The robbery was committed in broad daylight. Shortly before noon one of the strangers entered the office of the Singer Sewing Machine company and purchased a bottle of oil, tendering a $20 bill in payment, that he might see where the money was kept. An hour later, when the bookkeeper was alone in the office, the other stranger came in and inquired for a crate and was taken to

THE DEVIL CHAIR

A Chronicle of the Strange Adventures of John Haynes and His Gyroscopic Vehicle
THE KINGDOM OF THE NORTH By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman)

"I'LL BE YOUR DOG AND FOLLOW YOU WHEREVER YOU GO—I'LL—I'LL—"

When John Haynes escaped from the penitentiary at Nokomis Falls, by aid of the marvelous gyroscopic which he had invented, and set to work to bring retribution upon those who had falsely imprisoned him in order to obtain his western lands, he planned that the punishment should in each case, as far as possible, be commensurate with the crime. The news of his return, the swiftness with which his blows fell, paralyzed and dismayed the gang of swindlers who had defrauded him. They fled in haste to all parts of the country, to Europe, even, and, one by one, they encountered their victim's inexorable vengeance.

To the smaller fry—the crooked lawyers, clerks, land agents, all who had been constrained to play secondary parts in the conspiracy, Haynes felt contemptuously indifferent. It was more by accident than by intention that he came upon Riggs in Newark, New Jersey. Riggs had played a very small part in the affair; he had been agent for the stolen Nokomis lands and had sold them to those who, in good faith, purchased them in building lots. When Haynes escape broke up the confederacy, Riggs fled eastward, and in due course resumed his occupation in Newark, where he sold lots upon the New Jersey marshes to purchasers from other states.

Haynes was not looking for Riggs, and, having found him, would have forgotten him in his quest for those of the chief culprits who still remained unpunished. But Riggs was weakly and fundamentally dishonest. He had sold half an acre of what he called "choicest building land" to an elderly lady from Texas, a certain Miss Matthews, with whom Haynes had become well acquainted, and had succeeded in raffling the deal before she inspected her water-god territory. Haynes had a few days of leisure about that time, and he took up the case for her, acting in the guise of her nephew. Riggs had not changed, but Haynes had—greatly. Riggs did not have the slightest remembrance of the man who appeared before him in the little tin-roofed real estate shanty located upon the edge of that easternmost tangle of Newark which stretches out toward Hoboken.

"You've got to take those lots back, Mr. Riggs," said Haynes warmly. "They were sold under false pretenses."

"Can't be done, sir," answered the other, puffing busily at his cigar. "They were sold in good faith and bought according to law."

"They're under water. Who's going to build upon a swamp?"

"Why don't she sue for her money?" asked Riggs insolently.

"See here, Mr. Riggs," said Haynes. "You're a greedy, unprincipled land shark, and you've trampled many victims. But you aren't going to trim Miss Matthews. That seven thousand is nearly all she has. I'll let you get out of it with a thousand."

"Why should I take a thousand when I've got the seven?" murmured Riggs lazily. He was a fat, bloated man of great physical strength, although unwieldy, and he was not in the least terrified by Haynes. The latter changed his tactics.

"All right, if you won't there's no more to be said, I suppose," he answered, shrugging his shoulders.

Riggs turned round in his swivel chair and leered at him.

"Say, what's your game, young fellow?" he asked. "That put-up act about being Miss Matthews' nephew didn't go with me. Why? Because yesterday she asked me to give back her property on the ground that she was an orphan and alone in the world. What were you trying to—"

skin me for five hundred of that thousand you spoke of?"

Haynes could not have had a better opening. He drew up a chair and sat down beside the fat real estate agent. "Better than that," he said quietly.

"What then?" asked Riggs, interested.

"The old lady's a bit wrong here," said Haynes, tapping his forehead. "She didn't mind the water, but she wanted her money back to invest in a perpetual motion machine instead."

She had a visit from an angel who advised her to buy stock in it. I was the angel."

"What—the dickens?" soliloquized Riggs, swinging round swiftly and staring hard at the other.

"Yep," said Haynes, nodding his head and buttonholing the real estate man—a mannerism useful for purposes of emphasis. "She's as rich as Croesus, but all her money's tied up in conservative enterprises, and since she's begun to grow dippy she's been drawing it out and buying gold bricks and white elephants. Her father left her two hundred thousand."

Riggs whistled.

"I trailed her from Texas," Haynes pursued. "I've bought her shares in every outlawed property that can't be put on the market. But, as I was saying, the angel advised her to invest in perpetual motion stock. I did it—I have a little monoplane out in the marshes."

"You—don't say!" said Riggs, staring thoughtfully at the other. "Why are you telling this to me?" he suddenly asked, suspiciously.

"Because," said Haynes, looking straight at the other. "I came to Newark specially to get your aid. I was advised by a friend of mine—Chauncey E. Robertson of Benderville."

Riggs fell back in his chair and his face went white. Robertson had been a leading spirit in the Nokomis land frauds, and Riggs had thought that none of his confederates would cross his path again. He looked at Haynes keenly, trying to learn how much he knew. But he did not remember having seen him before.

Five years in prison had made a great alteration in the Englishman's appearance, and Riggs had only seen him once previously.

"Don't get scared," said Haynes cheerfully. "It's all right. Robertson mentioned you as a likely partner in a deal I was contemplating, and I intended to look you up before Providence threw this easy chance in my way. I trailed Miss Matthews up here from Texas, sounded her on spiritualism, and found her ready to take a book. She's seen me flying down from the clouds on a dark night four miles off in the marshes, and as my monoplane was draped in white she was quite ready to receive a special revelation. See here, Mr. Riggs," he said, suddenly coming to the point, "there's another revelation booked for tomorrow night on the old pipe where it crosses the Passaic. I've got the perpetual motion stock all ready and she has been told to bring along her check book. She wants twenty-five thousand dollars' worth, and she's only nineteen thousand in the bank; that's why she wants her money for the lots. Are you game to come along and bring the money?"

"Well," said Riggs, smiling, "under the circumstances it would be unjust to force those lots upon the poor old lady. Yes, I think I can manage it—if you'll put up a couple of thousand as a sign of your confidence in me," he added, smiling. "I'm no rube, you know, Mr.—you never told me your name."

"Tupman," said Haynes promptly. "I understand. You shall have your two thousand by the first mail tomorrow, a certified check. I guess you won't leave your happy little business to run away with it. And now let me tell you if ever you saw a man and show your face in Newark again I'll kill you for sure."

"Then you aren't going to kill me now?" demanded Riggs, and the passing of his chief terror gave back to him something of his courage. "It's mighty cold up here, Mr. Haynes," he said with an effort at jocularity. "Suppose you turn her head toward Newark and let me get to bed. Tomorrow I'll settle up my affairs and quit; I swear you won't see me again—or Miss Matthews either."

"My good Riggs," said Haynes solemnly, "you will be a good deal colder before I get through with you."

"Where are you going to take me?" cried the other. "Ain't that the bay down there? For the Lord's sake, let's get out of the lot, where—where's the gasoline given out?"

"It won't give out," Haynes answered. "This machine has a double supply. One part comes from the gasoline tank that feeds the motor, the other from the one which supplies the gyroscope."

"The gyroscope?" gasped Riggs. He knew how, by the invention of this fiendish machine, Haynes had escaped the systematic search of his enemies and how, using it, he had run them down and devoted them to the terrible reprisal. "The gyroscope?" he repeated in helpless horror. He looked down again, he was not so nauseated now by the flight through the clouds. To him it seemed that the machine was standing still. Haynes read his thought and made haste to answer him.

"Yes, the gyroscope," he answered, placing a mocking emphasis upon the words. "How fast do you think we are going?"

"Twenty miles an hour!" suggested Riggs.

"Three hundred and seventy-five," answered Haynes briskly. "Doesn't seem credible, does it? But the gyroscope cuts the air like a screw and draws a barrier of light; that's why you can't feel the breeze, which otherwise would blow us from our seats. Now, I'll tell you where you are going, Riggs. You are a land agent, especially building lots, aren't you? You've been in land all your life, led for it, thieved for it, and sent innocent men to the penitentiary for it. I am going to give you all the land you will want for the remainder of your life. You said that was the bay, I believe. No, Riggs, that is the Atlantic ocean, and we are now two hundred miles northeast of New York and heading for Labrador!"

"Labrador?" gasped the other.

"An excellent place for you," Haynes answered cheerfully. "Several hundred million acres of unknown, unexplored and virgin territory specially suited for building operations. No germs, no dust, no mosquitoes, and excellent drinking water. If you want a summer home that is a home, where you won't rub elbows with your neighbors, and where your children can have rumpling room, go to Labrador!"

"You're not going to dump me down in Labrador and fly home again?"

"I hope to, Mr. Riggs. And please consider that we furnish transportation free—not even a coupon is necessary."

The other sank down in stupefaction at the fiendish scheme which had been conceived. How was he to obtain food or shelter in that terrible, snow-bound, unknown country? How could he find the return path? Haynes, watching him, touched the gyroscope and suddenly the machine bent into a furious gale. Riggs clutched at the bar frantically.

"Merely a veering wind," said Haynes. "It caught us sideways. Don't be alarmed, for with the gyroscope you cannot possibly be upset. The principle is very simple; by setting it in motion it automatically retains it until the mechanism runs down, thereby insuring the absolute stability of any vehicle to which it is attached. This principle has long been known but—"

"For God's sake, listen," shouted his unhappy companion. "I've got twenty thousand. I'll give it to you if you'll put me down somewhere in a civilized country. Let me off at Bar Harbor and you'll have time to cash the check I'll give you and get away before I can return. Don't take my life. If you kill me, who did so little, what will you do to the rest?"

"I've settled the rest," responded his companion, and an angry scowl came over his features as he remembered the tragic encounters which he had with the members of the land gang. That he had wreaked his revenge had not satisfied his craving for justice; it was so strong that he felt now that only forgiveness could have met the needs of the situation. Bitterly he wished that he had not glighted his hate upon such food, which only increased the sense of his own importance.

He touched the lever and the machine dipped until she was flying not more than a hundred feet above the earth. There was no water in sight; they were traversing a forest belt. "Maine!" said Haynes, and again his companion noted that the machine seemed almost motionless, an astonishing optical illusion produced by the incredible swiftness of that astonishing journey. Haynes flew higher again and dipped into the fog of the clouds.

So, hour after hour, they flew. And all the while his miserable companion shivered at his side, now wildly imploring mercy, now sullenly acquiescent in his fate when he perceived that neither prayers nor offers of money could move his enemy. Haynes had scornfully rejected the offer of the twenty thousand; he was bent on exacting justice to the uttermost. Sometimes the thought crossed his companion's mind to fling himself upon him and, by brute force, hurt him from the machine; but that would be merely suicidal for even if he succeeded he was entirely ignorant of the principle which guided their craft upon its even keel among the drenching clouds.

"The machine flew lower; water appeared. 'The Gulf of St. Lawrence,' explained Haynes, and pointed skyward. 'Do you see Pegasus?' he asked. 'That constellation is now low visible in lower latitudes. And there is Castorpea. Riggs," he chuckled, "what a fine story you can put into your next prospectus about the starry heavens!"

The other flung himself upon his knees and grasped at his companion's hands.

"Forgive me," he babbled, "and I'll work and slave for you always. I'll help to bring the conspirators to justice. I know where most of them are to be found; there must be some of them left."

"Who?" Haynes asked scornfully.

"He's in the penitentiary, serving a sentence for forgery."

"My God! Judge Charteris, then. He was bribed to send you up for fourteen years. Don't leave that old fox out of the reckoning!"

"O, he?" answered Haynes carelessly. "I've got him in a lunatic asylum."

"Jack Poole, then."

"Dead, he was the first."

"Jenkins, Robertson's law clerk—he was in with them. Frank Staples! Beyer!"

"They've all got what was coming to them," said Haynes grimly, and again he felt that torturing sense of the impotence of revenge.

"I tell you what I'll do, Riggs," said Haynes presently, apparently addressing himself to some imaginary auditor. "I'll send you into the interior of Labrador, where you'll mean death to you, and since so many worse scoundrels have been spared that extreme penalty, I think perhaps I may give you a chance for life also. I'll deposit you in the forests a hundred and fifty miles north of Quebec. You'll be able to make civilization in four or five days if you're a good walker, and you'll get some needed exercise. When you get down look for the Pole Star, turn your back on her, and go in the opposite direction till sunrise. Then steer a course by the sun until the Pole Star comes into view again. Riggs, what number of building lots will you cover in those few days?"

Riggs sobbed—he was crushed, and the frightful conflict of emotions, hope struggling with despair and terror, had wholly unnerved him. Twenty minutes later he was incapable of response. Haynes shut off the gyroscopic motor, and the machine fluttered to earth in the midst of a semi-open country, in which pine trees grew sparingly. All round were the limitless wastes. Haynes got out of the machine, and, at his command, the other followed him.

"Keep away from the machine, Riggs," said Haynes, drawing a revolver from his coat pocket. "If Riggs was not aware of that, he that the muzzle described wide circles round him—he was too broken in spirit. He cowered, shivering and stamping his feet upon the frozen ground."

"Here's a box of matches, Riggs," said Haynes drawing one from his overcoat pocket and tossing it to him. "You'll be able to light a few fires. Don't waste them. I don't know just exactly where we are," he added in mock apology. "I'm afraid I've taken you too far to the north—we're almost beyond the timber belt. However, you'll strike a river if you look round from the land; he well watered, you must add to your prospectus. Remember that all streams flow into Hudson bay, and so follow them toward the source southward. You set his face sternly against excuse-making, both in himself and in others. A reason, he used to say, is always worth listening to; an excuse never. For an excuse, in this sense, is an attempt to evade a responsibility which belongs to us. If we have been prevented by reason wholly beyond our control from doing what we were expected to do, those reasons may be given fair consideration, but if we could properly have done what was expected of us, then let our minds and our lips be sealed against the consideration or the offering of any excuse. People soon come to respect one who, though he may make mistakes and even failures, never makes excuses. Not the least of the disasters of excuse-making is the fact that it tends to prevent our seeing how to keep from making the same mistake over again.—Sunday School Times

The province of Alberta has a coal area of 121,218 miles, with an estimated quantity available for consumption of 90,000,000,000 tons.

Inexcusable Excuses. When we have failed to do what we ought to do, an excuse never sets the matter right. It only makes matters worse. "You never yet found refuge in one excuse but there was another one awaiting you." Those who knew the late H. Clay Trumbull found that was seized with panic and flew quickly away. The odor of human perspiration seemed to have greater effect on them than the smoke.

Of course it is a well known fact that to some animals the odors of other animals are unbearable, even different races of men have their distinctive odors, and some are unpleasant to others. It is safe to assume that the odor of man to the wasp is as unbearable as the odor of the skunk to the man. Anyhow, this method of fighting wasps has been adopted almost to the exclusion of previous methods by the particular engineer who saw the safe and sure effect of its trial; but it takes some little nerve to do it.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Simple Method That is Even More Effective Than the Oldtime Employment of Fire.

Here's a way to fight wasps that is commonly practiced by government engineers when out surveying:

On the government surveys the usual method of getting a big wasp nest out of the line is to set fire to some moss placed in the fork of a long limb, and thus burn the nest up. The

WORK FOR SIBERT

BUILDER OF GATUN DAM WILL MAKE PLANS FOR RECLAMATION IN CHINA.

WELL FITTED FOR THE TASK

Arthur P. Davis and Daniel M. Mead, Both Distinguished Engineers, Selected for His Assistants—Start Soon for Orient.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—In recent dispatches from Washington the plan of the Chinese government to reclaim thousands of square miles of drought and flood lands was described in detail. Representatives of the Chinese government conferred with representatives of the American Red Cross and as a result Miss Mabel Boardman, head of the Red Cross in America, has requested President Wilson to designate Lieut.-Col. William L. Sibert of the corps of engineers, United States army, as chairman of the engineering commission to go to China and to formulate a plan for the reclamation of the vast land tracts.

Colonel Sibert was the builder of the Gatun dam, locks and spillway and the creator of the Gatun lake of the Panama canal. His work was completed April 1, and since then he has been in Washington awaiting orders. The work which will confront him in China will be as trying in its way, both climatically and in actual labor, as that in which he was engaged on the canal zone.

A part of the story of the work to be done in China has been told in the public prints. In one flooding of the country in the district to be reclaimed 1,000,000 Chinese lost their lives. The suffering that ensued among the living was fearful. The Red Cross spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in relief work in this Chinese section which so frequently was desolated. The oriental government is arranging with foreign bankers, said to be American, for the most part, for the loan of millions of dollars with which to complete the project of reclamation.

Fitted for the task.

Congress by a concurrent resolution authorized the president to grant a leave of absence to an engineer of the army and to loan the services of the designated officer to the Chinese government. The Chinese authorities and the officers of the Red Cross fired upon Colonel Sibert as the man whose experience and record best fitted him for the work and so the president has been asked to name this army officer for the Chinese work.

Associated with Colonel Sibert will be two other great engineers, Arthur P. Davis, chief engineer of the reclamation service of the United States government, and Daniel M. Mead of the University of Wisconsin. The commission will leave soon for China with a force of surveyors and assistant engineers and will spend five months in laying plans to prosecute one of the greatest engineering works of the ages.

As soon as Colonel Sibert had completed his work in Panama and his duties as a member of the isthmian canal commission were ended, he volunteered for work in the field in Mexico, but the engineering positions with the projected first army of invasion had been filled by detail, and as there seemed to be no prospect that any army from the north was to be sent into the field, Colonel Sibert finally consented to go to China.

Men Who Will Help Him.

Arthur P. Davis, chief engineer of the government's reclamation service, is from Illinois. He was born in December, 1851. He has been connected with many great engineering projects. He conducted surveys and explorations some years ago in Arizona, New Mexico and California and was in charge of the hydrographic examinations of the Nicaraguan and Panama canal routes.

Daniel W. Mead is now professor of hydraulic engineering at the University of Wisconsin. He lived in Illinois for a great many years, at one time being city engineer of Rockford. He has built water works for seven or eight of the largest cities of the United States, and after the floods of last year he was employed by the state of Ohio to work on a plan for the prevention of future disasters.

Mr. Mead has been consulting engineer of hydraulic works and power plants for a good many years. He is a member of the American engineering societies of the world.

New Home for Women's Club.

The corner stone of the new club house for the Congressional Club of Women has just been put in place. Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, made the principal address. His wife has been one of the moving spirits in the club for a good many years.

The club house was made possible by a deed of gift of land from Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the former Republican senator from Missouri. The new structure will stand at New Hampshire avenue and U street, and also virtually on Sixteenth street, sometimes called the Avenue of the Presidents. It is a commanding site and it is understood that the building will be worthy of its location and its purpose.

This Congressional Club of Women is one of the most interesting institutions in the City of Washington. It was organized a little less than ten years ago by a few women whose husbands were in congress. Under its not hesitate to attack dogs. One afternoon, when this cat lay on the porch, a squirrel came out of the tree to the house for his evening meal. The cat gathered himself together and made a dash for the squirrel; the squirrel in turn ran for the tree with a shrill squeal of terror—or was it defiance?

With a bound, the squirrel went up the tree some three or four feet; then he quickly turned about, and hanging by his hind feet to the bark, he faced his enemy. The cat had expected to seize the squirrel by the neck as he ran, but this show of resistance brought him to a halt; the squirrel at once took advantage of the cat's hesitation, and sprang at him with bared teeth and claws unsheathed. That surprise was too much for Tom's courage; he turned tail and the brave squirrel actually chased him over a hedge some hundred feet away. Then the squirrel leisurely returned to his nesting tree—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Another family pet is a large male cat, a good fighter, who does pay for the members.

The members of the committee are to receive salaries at the rate of $10,000 a year from April 1, 1914, to December 31, 1914, inclusive, and such necessary traveling and living expenses when on duty connected with the work as may be approved by the secretary of war.

By the terms of the act, only one member of the committee will draw full salary, for there is a special provision in the law that the salaries as fixed shall include any salaries which members of the committee may now be drawing from the government.

Colonels Goethals and Hodges and Civil Engineer Rousseau, who are still connected with work in Panama, are drawing $10,000 a year each, will not get a cent of pay for the work on the committee. General Gorgas, who is the surgeon general of the United States army, will draw only the difference between his present army pay and the amount fixed as his compensation as a committeeman.

Colonel Sibert is going to China for five months to formulate a reclamation plan for the Chinese government, and as his army pay stops while he is on his trip, the Chinese government will give him his compensation. He will get no salary at all except for a month or two after he returns from his preliminary work in China. Richard L. Metcalf, the only civilian member of the committee, will draw full pay, which is pay for nine months at the rate of $10,000 a year.

In a few days the members of the committee will prepare invitations to all the nations of the world to be represented at the celebration in honor of the canal opening.

Sentiment Enters In.

The appointment of this committee of arrangements is to some extent a matter of sentiment. Its members, with one exception, spent seven years working on the isthmus under pressure to get the great work completed as soon as possible. When the isthmian canal commission was abolished in April three of the members left the isthmus to take up their ordinary work in life. The other members were held there to help complete the plans for the operation of the canal. It was felt by congress and by the administration that it would be unkind to these commissioners who had worked so hard on the great canal project if they were not allowed to be present at the opening of the canal in some official capacity. Moreover, it was felt that they were best fitted to make the preparations for the opening.

Vernon park is in Germantown, a part of Philadelphia. For many years it was the home of the Wister family, and contains many rare and beautiful trees; the stately colonial house still stands, and is used by the Site and Relic society, which has collected there a great many interesting relics of colonial days.

Several years ago the experiment of introducing gray squirrels into the park was tried. The little animals have thriven and multiplied until they have spread over a considerable part of the town adjacent to the park. In front of the house of a Companion reader stands a large maple tree. There are squirrel nests in it, and the family provides a daily ration of nuts for the little animals, which have become so tame that they will take food from the hand.
